The easiest way to collect a lead from your website is using a simple form, but the hard part comes with remembering to do something else with the data. Don't you want to automatically add those leads directly to your email marketing list? With this integration, now you can! Automatically create or update a Mailchimp subscriber as soon as a new Google Forms submission is received. HOW IT WORKS A new response to your Google Form is received Google Form to Mailchimp creates a new Mailchimp subscriber or updates an existing subscriber WHAT YOU NEED Gmail or Google Workspace account Mailchimp account Knowledge Base Contact Us Email Support When a Squarespace 6 form is connected to a Mailchimp list, the structure of the form is mirrored to the list's data configuration. Each Squarespace form field is mapped to an equivalent Mailchimp list field automatically as the form is built. Form submissions are then captured in Mailchimp as list subscribers. This integration makes it easy for Squarespace users to add Mailchimp newsletter signup forms to their sites. Using Mailchimp with Squarespace Troubleshooting Mailchimp issues Squarespace + Mailchimp Integrations Help Contact Support Email To use a custom signup form on your website that transmits subscriber data to your Mailchimp audience, you'll need to add some Mailchimp information to your form code. You'll locate the form action, user ID, audience ID, and input name elements in your hosted Mailchimp form, and insert them into the form you host on your website. This is an advanced feature and is recommended for users familiar with custom coding. Contact your developer, or hire a Mailchimp Expert if you need assistance. In this article, you'll learn where to find this information. Click Audience. Click Audience dashboard. If you have more than one audience, click the Current audience drop-down and choose the one you want to work with. Click the Manage Audience drop-down and choose Signup forms. Select Form builder. Highlight and copy the Signup form URL. Paste the Signup form URL into the address bar of a new browser tab or window and press Enter. Right-click (Windows) or control+click (Mac) anywhere on the page and choose View Page Source from the drop-down menu. In the page source for your Mailchimp hosted signup form, you'll find the pieces of code that need to be added to the form code on your website. First, copy and paste the form action and input information into the body of your custom signup form. Then, find the input type for each audience field, and copy that information into the corresponding fields in your custom signup form code. All of these values must be copied to your custom signup form for the data transfer to work properly. Browse or search the page for "form action" to find the first piece of code you need, and copy the lines that look something like this.
